As our lives accelerate to keep pace with today's frantic world, the possibility of truly arriving at a destination grows in importance. Hotel rooms represent one such place where the boundary between journey and arrival, movement and stillness is most tangible.

Interior designers are faced with the challenge of creating rooms that allow an authentic stillness in the most inherently transient of interior spaces. 101 Hotel Rooms presents different design concepts by Corinna Kretschmar-Joehnk and Peter Joehnk, joint managing directors of Hamburg-based interior architects JOI Design and specialists in the field of hospitality design.

The projects are organised by means of categories such as resort, urban and beach hotels and each is presented with of plans and drawings as well as an explanatory text that reveals the concept behind each design.

What makes this title especially valuable is the direct insight into the planning process of two professional and highly successful interior designers, but the strong and inspirational photography will be the aspect that leaves the biggest impression.
