The local artistic heritage as well as the 10th century and Baroque castles in neighboring Schlossgarten Park served as inspiration for the recent soft refurbishment of the Diplomatic and Presidential Suites at Le Méridien Stuttgart in Stuttgart, Germany.

Hamburg, Germany-based JOI-Design highlighted both impressive outdoor views and homey interior details in updating the 1,722-sq-ft (160-sq-m) Diplomatic Suite and the 2,691-sq-ft (250-sq-m) Presidential Suite, billed as the largest suite in Stuttgart.

Oversized mirrors in the Diplomatic Suite living room capture light and the views of surrounding gardens while taupe and gray textiles with muted purple accents allow orange in the artwork to stand out. Photos used courtesy of JOI-Design.

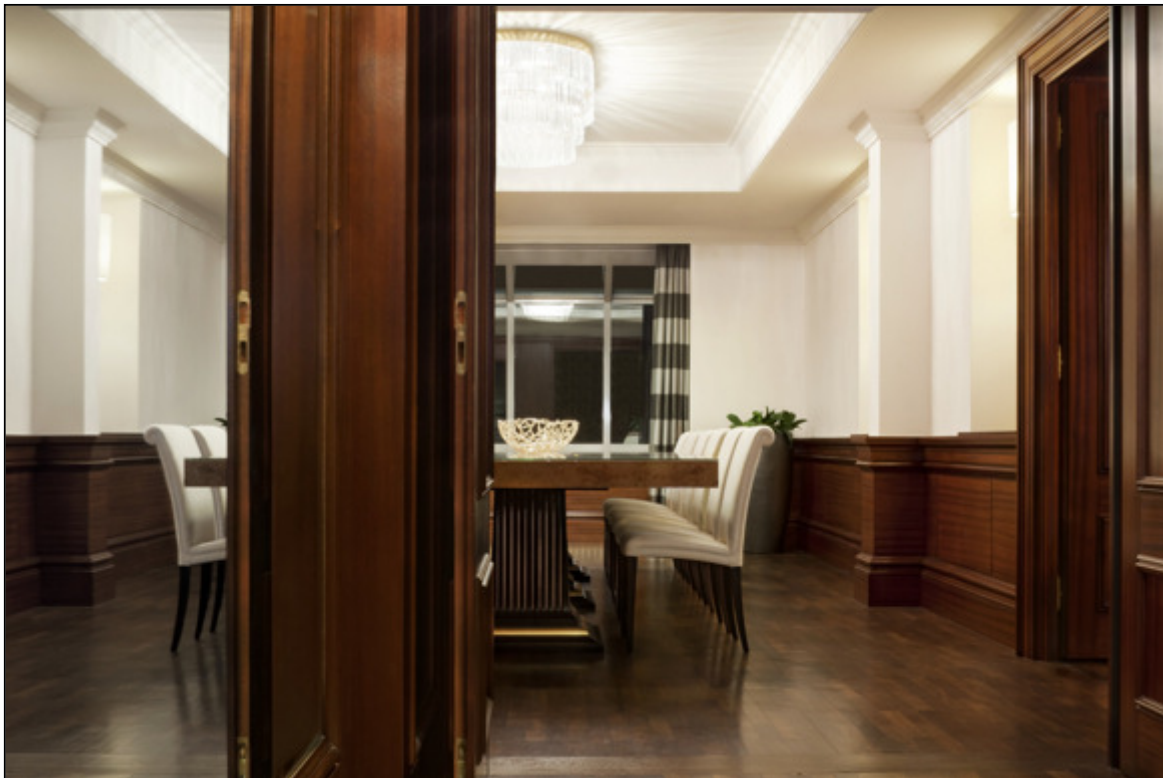

The Diplomatic Suite's dining room features a neutral palette of solid colors and a disc-shaped "floating" chandelier.

The Diplomatic Suite's master bedroom uses a predominance of white and floral wall coverings to achieve a feminine feel.

The living room in the Presidential Suite features a gray and gold color palette and mirrors with polished timber frames to draw in the light and surrounding views.

A conference room with a 12-seat table and tiered crystal chandelier is part of the Presidential Suite.

The area adjacent to the Presidential Suite's living room offers a round dining table and a solarium fitted with ivory upholstered loungers.
